The Festival of All Saints

celebrates the power of God at work in the lives of all saints, especially those who do not have their own calendar days. As part of that observance, we light candles for those who have had kingdom “birth-days” during the past year. We remember those who have died—who now claim the promise of new life in the kingdom; and we remember those who have been baptized during the past year, being born into God’s family and the death and resurrection of Jesus.
